MANY ENTRIES

Numerous Exhibit Bookings Being Listed For Ballard School Fair, Saturday.

Everyone who reads this paper should certainly plan to spend Saturday, May 28, at the Fair ground of the Ballard School, on the upper River Road. The Midway will be full of attractions, in addition to all the interesting exhibits, shows and games. Everyone who was at the last Fair will remember the fun the bottle throwing contest was, and this year it will be as much as ever. The new shows on the Midway, the Turtle Derby is expected to create the most excitement, but there will also be a pony track, an astrologer, a hand-writing expert and a card reader. It is believed that there will be a real live elephant to ride on.

A real deal of interest among county schools has been shown in the track events which have been planned. There will be baseball games all day, and any school which would like a game can obtain one by communicating with Mr. Cartleton Saunders at the Ballard School. There will be running races and broad jumps for both boys and girls of different ages. The Fair is hoping that competition in these events will represent all parts of the countryside, and wants every boy and girl to try out at least one.

The plans for the horse show are coming in well. Many of the best saddle horses in the state will be on hand, in both the three-gaited and five-gaited classes. There are a number of entries in the mare and colt class of 1932 track 100.

If you have something you would like to enter in the poultry or stock show, cooking or sewing, in fact in any department of the Fair, which you have forgotten to enter, bring it along anyway. Entries will be open in all classes up to 10 A. M. of the morning of the Fair.

At 1:30 John E. Brown, president of the Kentucky Farm Bureau, will address the meeting, and he will be followed at 2 o'clock by W. H. Settle, president of the Indiana Farm Bureau. Another on the program is L. A. Vennes, College of Agriculture.

Mr. Houk stated yesterday that the Association has more than 6,000 livestock shippers' patrons. The association extends these shippers invitation to be present at Saturday's meeting.

BLACK-CAPPED CHICKADEE

By Sheri Walker

"Chickadee was named for the note that it sings—chick-a- is often called the Black Capped Titmouse.

It is a small bird, less in size than the English Sparrow. It is a permanent resident of Kentucky, nesting in the thick woods.

Its food is the eggs of insects, principally on the ends of twigs and branches, leaving the tree trunk to the nutatches when it is closely associated.

It has a decidedly black cap coming down half way of the eyes. The side of the head is white. It has a black bib under the chin. There is some black on the wings and tail and the under parts are a drab white.

Insects must have some way of living over the winter in order to have supply in the spring. Most of them do this in an egg.

The female titmouse takes these tiny eggs to the small limbs and branches and even the trunks of trees. What are not devoured by birds in the winter are eaten in the spring and start the tribes of insects that do billions of dollars of damage to growing crops every year.

NEW MEDIUM OF EXCHANGE ISSUED

Checks On "Bank of Confidence" Put in Circulation Here.

$100 ISSUED AS EXPERIMENT

The "Bank of Confidence" was opened in Jeffersontown Tuesday night.

Merchants and other local public citizens, in an effort to accelerate commerce and to stimulate the circulation of money, bills and inspire confidence in the community, met in the Jefferson and voted to issue script in the form of checks drawn on the "Bank of Confidence". Notices had been sent out and some 25 or 30 men gathered to discuss the idea, which is patterned after one used in an area of the state of Florida several years ago, and which was said to have been productive of good results, in the stimulation of trade and in settlement of slow accounts.

A. B. Wiggin, former Florida resident, had known of the plan and had suggested that it be adopted by the local citizens. W. W. Rodenbeck, president of the Jefferson Garage, acted as chairman of the meeting and was joined by Dr. J. B. Shacklette and W. F. Stucky. Dr. Stucky is brother-in-law to Mr. Smith and is also chairman of the Town Council.

Former Town Marshal Willis Simpson was sworn into immediate service as peace officer of the town until Marshal Smith is able to return to his duties.

Mr. Rodenbeck issued Thursday morning by County Judge Henry L. Fox, charging Tolbert with malicious assault. The Town Council is to meet in special session Friday night, at which time it is expected that a reward will be offered for the capture of Tolbert.

GET RID OF THE "BOARDER" COWS

Hoards! Dairyman carries a graphically illustrated story of the importance of cow testing and culling in its current issue. The drawing pictures 23 cows and makes a concise statement of their record-keeping period of time.

The herd taken as a whole is said to have provided $850 for the family's living. The ten best cows actually netted $955 according to the individual tests made; but the thirteen low producers are up $135 of the profits made by the better cows.

Such a situation exists in far too many instances throughout the dairy industry. There is little enough profit in producing to care for the less fortunate. Now is the time of all times to get rid of boarder cows. Every animal should be made to pay its way if at all possible.

The sketch referred to above should be hung in every dairy barn. It is an excellent educational tool in the new Louisville Milk Ordinance but it certainly means a lot to the producers who are feeding cows that are not up to the standard of production.

WHY NOT EXTEND A GOOD THING?

Why should Uncle Sam sell a commodity or service, such as printing in competition with local, privately-owned, tax paying printing plants?

We know that 15,000 post offices have been taken for a service that is not an essential function of the Post Office Department or a necessary service in handling the mails?

The reason for raising these questions is that Uncle Sam offers to print return cards on stamped envelopes. With a stamp on every envelope, the U. S. Post Office located in every center of population in the land Uncle Sam does a volume of printing business that enables him to offer customers a ridiculously low price. The orders for printed stamped envelopes total about a half a year—over 40,000,000 for each of the 365 days in the year!

The purchasers of this service offered by Uncle Sam are not the "common people," some of whom address letters improperly and thereby contribute to the cost of maintaining the Dead Letter Office. They are the professional men, manufacturers, the public schools, colleges, fraternal organizations—all dependent upon prosperous towns, home trade, local pay rolls, taxpayers able to pay their taxes—these constitute the customers who take advantage of Uncle Sam's bargain price on printed envelopes.

It's O. K. for Uncle Sam to sell printing what not extend a good thing and insist that he add to his line and thus serve a much larger number of post office patrons? Why not? We have not been to the post office in the last 10 years. Why not?

Even though Uncle Sam to sell not only printing—that accommodates only a limited number of customers—but other products. Think of the saving in price that would be possible thru enormous volume and rapid turnover. And Uncle Sam is lucky; he has the Post Office counter.

Unless Uncle Sam quits the printing business, printers should not be allowed to sell post office patrons to a post office. We sell not only printing—that accommodates only a limited number of customers—but other products. Think of the saving in price that would be possible thru enormous volume and rapid turnover. And Uncle Sam is lucky; he has the Post Office counter.

TURN A DEAF EAR TO UNKNOWN APPEALS

More and more of the mutterings we hear that the editorial columns of the press against a certain racket as a sales promotion idea. Whose doobell isn't or women who have to take subscriptions to some magazine professionally as a means of working a way through college?

This type of magazine salesman has worked on the public's sympathy until that sympathy has become rather callous and is fast dead. And the public's attitude to this line of argument not only in behalf of such objects but even to the more worthy causes as well.

It's time to turn a deaf ear to such appeals before half the population has left the country.

That the national income of the United States has been estimated at over eighty-nine billion dollars annually. Our Navy costs but forty-three hundred dollars per person, that's one cent per capita per day.

That to build up in modern ships to the treaty terms by the end of the year 1936, the United States will have to build 118 ships; Japan only 12.

That Naval expenditures have increased but 12 percent since 1927, 20 percent since 1930, and the worldwide awake percentage of Mr. W. M. Moreman, Kendrick Lewis and W. C. Thompson.

INTENSIVE FIGHT

Pershing Urges Organized Front to Combat Racketeering and Similar Evils.

Local committees of women to fight racketeering, kidnaping, extortion and other organized criminal activities are being suggested in many American towns and cities as a result of General Pershing's recent appeal for an intensive drive against the crime problem. The general has volunteered to serve as an honorary member of such committees.

"The ability of the underworld to terrorize society lies in the fact that it is the underworld that society is not," declares General Pershing in the American Magazine. At present, the fight is directed against the individual, that is, otherwise. Why should we not form associations of men and women committees, so that the gang will find itself confronted with an organization larger and stronger than itself?

Such committees of women, General Pershing argues, could force prompt action by the authorities. "Suppose a number of young men are threatened with a kidnapping threat," he explains, "or a man is visited by a gangster who says he is going to kill him, or a section of the town experienced a series of holdups. If the police station or city hall fails to get satisfaction, possibly because of an alliance between officials and the underworld."

"But if the neighborhood committee stands ready, at the very first threat of gangster activity within its borders, to take action against the invasion, the picture changes. The threatened man immediately goes to his relatives and friends, who advise with the neighborhood committee. Representing the neighborhood, the committee, it could demand immediate action by the police and by the city authorities."

Committees of this kind, would be vigilance committees, not in the old sense, but in the sense that they would be ever vigilant in the protection of their community, in the absence of civil duties. I would consider it an honor to serve on such a committee."

These committees would serve many other purposes beyond the suppression of racketeering. They would be instrumental in the grafting of officials.

They could hold weekly or monthly meetings to discuss the problems of gangsterism. These meetings would serve to bring out and develop, as no institution we now possess does, new leaders, especially among the young citizens, in every community."

POTPOURRI

Many Kinds of Beetles
More than 150,000 different species of beetles have been collected and described by scientists, making up the largest group of insects in the world. Twenty thousand of these are natives of Central and South America, and the "true beetle," all the species having mouths strong enough to invoke considerable damage to their prey. (See 1932 Western Newsweek, page 1.)

The average cost of new tires to American motorists today is fifty cents per thousand miles, compared with $1.00 in the year 1914.

THE HOUSE OF THE THREE GANDERS

"Come right upstairs. I've plenty of clothes for you," said Colonel Eastwood.

Soon Shad was seated at the supper table in dry clothing, and slippers.

"Tell us what happened to you and why you are here," said the Colonel.

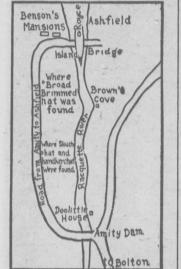

Shad began at the high point in his narrative.

"Somebody shot at me at one. He was on Center pond. The bullet almost took off my end of my nose. I was another bullet whistled past me. I got the shot of water when they hit the water. I knew about where the shooting came from. I made for the water and swam across to the bank and towed it ashore. I ran up the trail like a scared buck. I knew why that man was shooting at me. He was trying to get me out at the things in that pack basket."

"What did you get there?" the colonel asked.

Shad told of what he and Harry had learned of the man under the broadsword he was hastening down the road to Ashfield; of their search for and discovery of the body of the man, half of the group of men at the Westminster hotel and of Bony's bold words in their presence; of Doctor Gorrie's suggestions regarding the man who followed him to the camp.

Shad finally unfastened the pack basket in his basket and laid them before the astonished officers of the law. Colonel Blake drew a chart of the road and river from Ashfield to Amity Dam, reproduced herewith, with the location of Brown's Cove and the points where the body and the handkerchief were found.

Looking at the chart the judge said: "The handkerchief and slush had been found with the body. We must keep Brown's motive in mind."

"Yes, but I have not been quite satisfied with Brown's motive," said the district attorney. "The slender report of the coroner and the evidence of this boy indicate that he is a harmless and lovable old chap of a rather admirable spirit."

Shad told the story of the missing ring. He added: "That's why I am here."

"Well, you, your heart and your work are in credit to you," said the colonel. "You have faced many difficulties, this is not an easy problem, as we thought. We have to look for a deeper man than the tinker and a deeper motive than mere resentment. It is extremely improbable that two such men could have been shot directly at the boy by accident. If the old lumber camp was a beneficiary, why not he not show up here. He has no right to intrude from Center pond. It leads directly to food and shelter in this camp."

The judge asked: "Assume that he was trying to kill the boy, why would he have followed him to the old lumber camp? After circling the pond he would have known that he was too far away."

"Yes, but he may have thought that Shad was wounded and lying blood and going slowly or lying dead in the trees. He may have thought that the canoe it would have been his natural inference that he had hit his mark. I do not like this touch of insanity."

Shad said: "I am seconded to the opinion that he would have got his bearings and gone to his camp or he may be coming here any minute and telling of his misfortune at Center pond."

In the moment of silence that followed the judge's words Shad spoke out:

"I will never come here. I know it is the murderer. He knows that I know he has followed him to the old lumber camp."

Shad told them of that moment near the abandoned camp when the moonlight had shown him a masked face.

"And did he not call out when he heard you running away?"

"No, sir," Shad answered.

That is rather strange business," said the judge. "Why did he mask himself?"

"It was a cunning bit of surprise," the colonel answered. "The strange could then have robbed him of his treasures without being identified. Or, again, after dark, a light might be flashed in the darkness and the strange man is what happened. A sudden light out of the heavens fell moonlight showed us that man was not much wiser than he was."

only the blackness of the man's soul." "It is a reasonable theory," the judge said.

The colonel was examining the two hats which Shad had brought in his basket. Suddenly, he whistled and exclaimed: "Look here, Judge. Who does this man? Look here, Judge."

Inside the sweat band of the light-colored slouch hat some one had written with pen and ink these words:

"Shad is a long head that never turns."

"This is undoubtedly the hat worn by the murderer," said the colonel. "It is the kind of hat which Mrs. Doolett wore. It is the kind of hat which the handkerchief. This writing is that of a young woman accustomed to the use of a pen. She was a playful person of some sort. Who is she? Who is she? Who is she?"

"Robert Royce, maybe," said Shad promptly.

"Sure enough! Those are the two initials of the colonel. He was a man of Mrs. Doolett by her first husband, if I am not mistaken. He is the kind of man who would have been a good husband."

"I am going to take you into my office if you don't mind, and try to make a lawyer of you. I guess we can get along together. I want you to come to bed now and get a good rest. You must be tired."

He carefully wrapped the articles which he had been examining, and added: "I shall take good care of these things and go out of the world tomorrow."

He took Shad's hand and spoke those words which were a turning point in the life of Shad.

"Fand, I like you. I am going to take you into my office if you don't mind, and try to make a lawyer of you. I guess we can get along together. I want you to come to bed now and get a good rest. You must be tired."

He bolted the door and spoke those words which were a turning point in the life of Shad.

"I'll take the lead here."

He walked slowly, looking intently at the ground. He was near a deep pool when he stopped suddenly.

"Fand, these are Shad's tracks and here are the tracks of the man who followed him coming and going. He wore hunting boots."

The colonel took a ruler from his pocket and measured the tracks, the judge noting the figures.
